WHY USE A VIRTUOSO TRAVEL ADVISOR

Of all your life priorities, your leisure time is one asset you can't earn back. People who spend their time wisely know that it pays dividends to collaborate with a seasoned industry professional when it comes to fulfilling travel dreams. Virtuoso travel advisors provide personal, completely customized service before, during, and after every trip. Whether you enjoy being involved in your vacation planning, or prefer that someone you trust takes the reins, Virtuoso advisors are uniquely vested in your RETURN on LIFE®.

4 Reasons People Don't Work with a Travel Advisor & Why Virtuoso Clients Do

- 1 People feel that doing their own planning is empowering, and that giving it up will diminish their experience. Virtuoso clients decide the level of involvement that's right for them, and this may even vary from trip to trip. If you enjoy research and planning, you'll have a professional partner. If you prefer having your advisor handle all the details, they can do that, too. Either way, you'll enjoy quality, customized service.
- 2 They believe the Internet provides all the answers they need. Virtuoso clients view their advisor as a trusted resource whose industry knowledge, global relationships, and personal experience add tremendous value, and makes travel planning more enjoyable. A great advisor can validate your own research, and offer insightful recommendations to tailor each trip to your preferences, interests, and budget.
- 3 They believe an advisor adds to the cost of the trip. Virtuoso clients know better. A Virtuoso travel advisor has access to the same (and often better) pricing than available online, and can secure VIP benefits, amenities, access, and extras that you can't get on your own. To quote Warren Buffet, "Price is what you pay; value is what you get."
- 4 They don't understand the value of a travel advisor. Virtuoso clients rely on their advisors to make travel planning more efficient and enjoyable, to save time and money, and to lend expertise that makes a world of difference. A Virtuoso advisor also works on your behalf before, during, and after every trip. That's peace of mind you can bank on.

About Virtuoso

Virtuoso is a global, by-invitation-only network of luxury travel agencies and providers with agencies and advisors and preferred travel partners worldwide. Virtuoso advisors leverage their industry connections and extensive knowledge and experience to deliver exceptional value and customized service. For more information, please visit www.virtuoso.com.

5 Ways the New Gmail Could Make You More Productive at Work (Yes, We Said New!)

by
STAV ZIV

It's been years since Gmail got any drastic design changes. So, I'm not surprised to see all the excitement over the recent announcement about major updates.

Okay, it wasn't just that people on the Internet were excited. I was excited. I wanted to try it immediately, and reloaded my personal inbox a few times until I could see the option to "Try the new Gmail" when I clicked on the Settings wheel. If you're using Gmail through work you'll probably have to ask your administrator to enable the option before you can try it.

My initial reaction? It's certainly going to take some time for my eyes to get used to the new look (insert here: all the outcries anytime Facebook ever changed its newsfeed).

My second reaction? These new features could make you more productive (and sane) at work.

1. De-clutter Your Inbox Faster

I didn't always aspire to an organized inbox, but as I prepared to start my job at The Muse, I decided I would try to keep my new account super organized, labeling and archiving emails as part of my routine. Now, it stresses me out when I can't see the bottom of my inbox or if, the absolute horror, there's more than one page of unarchived messages.

One thing I've noticed is how inconvenient it's been to move messages out of my inbox, a problem the revamp seems to address. Instead of having to click the checkbox to the left of a message to access various actions at the top of your inbox, you'll now be able to hover right over each individual email before opening it and click on icons to archive, delete, mark as read or unread, or snooze it (see below). I can already lament the fact that there's no fifth option to add a label more quickly.

Gmail will also begin providing unsubscribe recommendations "based on cues like how many emails you get from a sender and how many of them you actually read," which could also help you declutter faster.

2. Remember Important Emails With "Nudges" and High-priority Notifications

As much as you try to stay on top of your inbox, sometimes things get lost, even important emails from people you usually respond to quickly. The revamped Gmail might surface older messages with notes such as "Received 3 days ago. Reply?" or "Sent 5 days ago. Follow up?" in a bright orangeish color to stand out from the black subject line and preview text. It's also adding a mobile feature that allows you to get notifications only for the most important emails, as determined by Gmail's algorithm.

3. Snooze Emails for Later

That fourth option when you hover over a message allows you to make it disappear from your inbox and reappear at whatever time you select. So if you don't like to see an inbox overflowing with messages you know you won't take care of until Friday, you can snooze them until then. And don't panic if you go a little crazy on the snoozing! There's an option on the left-hand side of the browser to click and see all your snoozed emails.

4. Let Artificial Intelligence Write Your Email for You

You might already use “Smart Reply” in the Gmail app for mobile, but now the feature is coming to the web version of your inbox. It suggests three quick responses to an email you've received that you can click on to use as the full message you'll send back or the start of one.

5. Use Your Calendar, Make a To-do List, and Take Notes Without Clicking Away

Switching over to the new Gmail, you'll notice three new icons running along the right-hand side of your inbox. They allow you to open Google Calendar, Google Keep (for notes), and Google Tasks (for to-dos) as a side panel alongside your inbox so you can view everything in one browser window.

It's embarrassing to admit how thrilled I've become—as a recently-converted inbox organizer who's now started cleaning up her personal account too—about any tool or strategy that'll make it easier to cut down the number of emails mocking me from between those parentheses. Whether you share this enthusiasm or think I'm a freak, you probably do care about simple ways you can be more productive at work. So it's worth at least trying some of these new built-in boosters to see if they make a difference for you.

Southeast Asia's Sexiest Supermodel

HM: How long have you been modeling, and how did you get into it?

Vi: I started modeling, back in the MySpace days. Someone reached out me, and asked me to model. I was like why not, so it started way back then going on over 10 years now.

HM: You've worked with some of the industries top photographers, can you name a few of your favorites?

Vi: Kenny Roland of course (laugh), he's really easy to work with and he's really good at his craft. Don Hales, he shoots really fast and we just get what we need. I enjoy working with Matt Taylor, and Eric Snyder.

HM: You're a sexy combination of Chinese, French, and Vietnamese. Which country do you feel closer too, and why?

Vi: Well I probably feel closer to Vietnamese, because that's mostly what I am. I was raised Vietnamese by both of my parents, the other two are just nice and fun additives. I love Vietnamese food, and I love the culture.

HM: Many have said Vi Ho's smile is memorizing, how does it feel knowing your fans feel that way about you?

Vi: I actually love it (laugh), I love that people notice the smile more then anything else. It shows me, that many of my fans aren't shallow. (laugh)

HM: Our readers wanna know, what are some of Vi Ho's turn on's?

Vi: I like people that are smart and funny. If I can't hold a conversation with you, I'll lose interest very quick! (laugh)

HM: Let's flip the coin here, what are some of your turn off's?

Vi: Bad teeth (laugh), and body odor. You have to smell good, at least shower. (laugh)

HM: Your portfolio is truly amazing, which style of modeling do you feel more comfortable doing most? Lingerie, Implied, Bikini, do you decide or is it up to the photographer?

Vi: It's usually a collaboration of both, but I guess my favorite would be Implied. Just because you can post it, I'm very comfortable in my own skin. So I prefer to do implied, just so it's easy to pose and it's just sexy. It's nice to leave a little to the imagination, I don't leave much - I know that, but I like to leave something. (laugh)

HM: When Vi Ho isn't modeling, what is she doing partying or relaxing?

Vi: I am relaxing, I love to clean and I love to cook. I'm very much like a house wife, I like doing laundry and I like to hang out with my do. (laugh)

HM: What's next for the gorgeous Vi, anything amazing coming up?

Vi: Just moving to Vegas in October, that's pretty exciting.

HM: If you could have three wishes, what would they be and why?

Vi: I don't know which one is better - ten million or ten billion. (laughs) I'd definitely want money for sure, so I can take care of all my family and friends. As long as I have money, I can do whatever and adopt all the dogs.

(laughs)

HM: You've traveled the world, is there any place or places you're still dying to visit? Why them?

Vi: I'm dying to visit Vietnam, cause I've never been there. I gotta visit the homeland for a little bit. I never got to spend enough time in Paris, so I would love to go to Paris. I just love exotic beautiful places, so I would love to Thailand and Maldives.

HM: Ok, last but not least. Is there anyone special in Vi's life? Don't be shy...

Vi: Yea, my dog! (laughs)

Hot Model Magazine would like to take a moment, to thank the gorgeous Vi Ho again, for gracing our cover and for this incredible interview.
